Dr. Albert B. Sabine,
Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Doctor Sabine:

I am a businessman of [redacted] and my hearing is getting pretty bad. Someone told me that a California doctor had treated a number of patients with nicotinic acid and thioimin. The general press all over the country carried this news about two weeks ago. The doctor's name was Stuart Selfridge of San Francisco.

I wrote him but did not succeed in getting an answer. I was wondering if the Rockefeller Foundation has any information on this subject of treating hard-of-hearing people and if so would appreciate it if you would mail it to me.

Your kindness will be remembered.

Yours very truly,
