My dear [Name],

I am deeply appreciative of your understanding letter and want to thank you very much indeed for your good wishes. I wish that I were in a position to offer some suggestions which would offer relief from your condition but unfortunately there is nothing of value to suggest at this time.

Studies dealing with arthritic conditions are in progress in a number of different laboratories and you may be sure that whenever new knowledge is uncovered it is made known to the medical profession through various scientific journals.

I hope that in due time you will be well again and able to pursue your interesting career.

Sincerely yours,

Albert B. Sabin
