Dear Dr. Sabin:

I read your article in our local paper and found it very interesting. The more I thought about it, the more I thought I should write and suggest that you try Goat Milk, being you are experimenting with Cow Milk.

Goat Milk is different from Cow Milk. It is the closest thing you can find next to Human Milk. It coats too. Perhaps between the Cow & Goat Milk you may find your solution.

I'd suggest Fresh Goat Milk in its natural stage from a Good Tested Dairy, with low bacteria count or a Certified Dairy.

I have some very good, purebred, French Alpine does and herd sires, that I think are tops.

I don't have much literature about Goat Milk, but if you'd like more information on the subject of Goat Milk, you may write to Marion Edwards - Editorial Office - Ashland, Virginia. She will be more than happy to help you.

Let me hear from you if you are not too busy, and good luck to you and your co-workers.

Sincerely,

Miss Alice Dlask
