November 25, 1942.

Dr. Joseph Brennemann,
4614 Sunset Boulevard,
Los Angeles, California.

Dear Doctor Brennemann:

I was out of town when your letter came and because I was extraordinarily busy upon my return, I regret to have been unable to reply earlier to your letter of November 3rd.

I am, of course, sorry that the chapter on Toxoplasmosis will not appear as scheduled. When you say that as things stand at present, that it will not appear before the August output of 1943, I wonder if you could indicate when it would go to press under those circumstances.

This is a young subject and progress is made continually and no chapter written on it one year is likely to be satisfactory the next. I would, therefore, appreciate it very much if you could return the paper and the illustrations to me and subsequently let me know when it would be needed to go to press. This is to permit me to make necessary additions or changes during the course of the year, as well as to have in my possession the illustrations that go along with it.

Sincerely yours,

Albert B. Sabin, M.D.
