Dear Albert:

Bill Hammon was telling me the other day in San Francisco about what to me was an extremely interesting biochemical analogy which you have come upon in poliomyelitis. It sounded to me as if you were opening up an extremely important field for exploration, and in a reprint which I am sending you on Landry's paralysis (along with some others which you may not have), I have toyed with such an idea. You may find something of interest in it. I would like very much to hear more about what you are doing.

I am just back from six months in Hawaii and the Pacific Islands, where I had a very interesting time going over the leprosy situation.

Hope to see you soon.

Cordially yours,

W. Lloyd Aycock, M. D.
