

Milwaukee Wis. June 28-1914

Dear friend:

No doubt you will be surprised, to receive this letter from me. I almost feel ashamed of myself not writing to you sooner. However this day I decided to write without delaying it any longer. Old saying is better late than never. You may be of the opinion that I have forgotten you altogether, such is not the case, My plans were made to go by the way of San Francisco, on my return trip from A. F. of L. Seattle convention last fall ^{and} call on you, this also I was obliged to cancel.

Yes indeed, I thought of you good many times since you left East, ^{and} will so, until the day will come, the gates open for your freedom. Well how are you anyway old scout, Are you in good health? Are you working hard, or have you been promoted? Does the boys from Frisco comes to see you? ^{and} furnish reading matter for you.

Our esteemed friend William, left with the rest of the bunch for their new place of abode on the 25th. inst.

You know where, from information through Press they were assigned to work of their trade. It was a sad parting the entire Union labor force, with thousands of friends were dissatisfied that he wasn't pardoned with 4 that were by the Pres. Hilson recently.

Old Frank has turned gray ^{and} aged through this constant strain upon him. But such is life. Hell Sam still here, in the same old place working at the trade, although it is slack at present I think it will pick up soon. I think I'll close for this time, with best regards from us all, If I know that you receive this or be pleased to hear from me I would write often ^{and} more, But I am in hopes you will be.

From your old friend Adam Gladky
