Dear Bill:

With regard to your inquiry about Dr. David R. Ginder, I should like to say that I came to know him quite well during the period of his association with me in Tokyo, in 1946. He is a very intelligent and very industrious worker who would make a worthwhile addition to any department. As a matter of fact, upon his return from Japan, he had several offers to join virus laboratories; but he felt that his interests were more in the field of internal medicine and, thus, has spent the last two years since returning from Japan in acquiring additional training in that field. I can recommend him to you most heartily and without any reservations whatsoever.

With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

Albert B. Sabin, M.D.
